BRIDGE LUNCHEON GIVEN
BY MRS. WILLIAM W. ARCHER

Mrs. and Mrs. C. F. Sauer Celebrate Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of Their Marriage With Brilliant Reception.

Mrs. John Landstreet, of Monument Avenue, will give a buffet luncheon at the Westmoreland Club on Friday, November 27, in honor of her niece, Miss Louise Broyles, of Atlanta, Ga., who is her guest here, and Miss Mary James, of Charlottesville, who is a debutante here this winter. The season's buds and the younger society men have been included in the invitations. Edwin Broyles and Clarke Howell, Jr., who will also be Mrs. Landstreet's guests for Thanksgiving, will receive with her on Friday. Delicate Reception.

One of the prettiest debutante functions of the season was the bridge luncheon given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. William Wharton Archer at her residence, 508 East Franklin Street, in honor of Misses Roberta Kyle Pleasants and Mary C. Tyler. The rooms were decorated everywhere in vases and bowls of chrysanthemums and roses, and luncheon was served at the card tables after the game was concluded. Mrs. Archer's guests for the afternoon included the debutantes, Misses Elizabeth Morton and Ann Roy Johnston, Miss Pleasants and Miss Tyler, who are two of the most entertaining buds of the year, and some charming young men who have been given for them since the social season began.

Brilliant Reception.
A quantity of fine and wonderful flowers banked the handsome rooms of the Sauer residence at 2315 West Grace Street last night, when Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Sauer celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Over 250 guests were invited, and the entire lower floor was thrown open to the guests during receiving hours. The decorations were most unusual and elaborate, and the electric lights and fountains and wonderful lights made the whole place into a fairyland of flowers. Pink roses and chrysanthemums, against a background of trailing vines and trellis work of rare plants, decorated the white and gold drawing-rooms and the conservatories, which were also thrown open to the guests. There were great bunches of natural grapes and festooned with shaded lights. Mr. and Mrs. Sauer received together in the drawing-room, and a stringed orchestra played throughout the evening.

In the dining-room, where a buffet supper was served, the table was arranged in a most unique fashion. The centerpiece was a plaster model of the scenes of the courtship, marriage and after life of Mr. and Mrs. Sauer, and tiny silver fish swam in a miniature lake arranged in the center. On the east side of the house a tent was erected and connected with the conservatories, and this was hung with evergreens and fall foliage and softly shaded lights. A number of prominent guests from a distance came to the home to attend the celebration, and some beautiful costumes were worn by the women present. Mrs. Sauer is a daughter of B. Hassel, and her husband is one of the leading business men in the country.

At Home Sunday.
Mrs. Sam Wallerstein will be at home at 225 West Grace Street Sunday night in honor of her guest, Miss Patricia Mack of Wheeling, W. Va. For Miss Boardman.
The Common-wealth Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will give Miss Boardman a dinner on Thursday evening at 5 o'clock at the Jefferson. The prominent workers who have been in the Red Cross work here will be asked to meet her. After the dinner there will be an informal reception, and later Miss Boardman will lecture in the Jefferson Auditorium. Any members of the Common-wealth Chapter who wish to attend the dinner must notify Mrs. W. S. Drewry, 1033 West Grace Street.

Miss Boardman will be met at the train by a representative committee, and will later make a short talk before the Colonial Dames that afternoon.

Evening Gown for Matron

Miller & Rhonda are exhibiting a number of fascinating things for evening wear. The model shown is of salmon pink velvet and crystal beaded. The dress is of a simple design in an apron effect with floral design in heads in the pastel shades. The bodice, which is sleeveless, is of chiffon, and there is a clever rose arrangement of gold net that is partly hidden by the soft net collar.

Your Child May Lead You

(Copyright, 1914, by Lillian Russell.)
In the natural order of things the mother should be better able to instruct the child how to live than the father. Just now, however, when school children are receiving special instruction in this vital subject, it is worth while for the mother to listen to a review of the course the child is following.

Children of to-day are enjoying more advantages by far than their mothers ever imagined when they were little girls, but the mother, through the assistance of the child, can turn back the hands of time and benefit through the same advantages. If she does she will add to her appearance and find a new joy in living.

The necessity for properly ventilated rooms and systematic exercise was much impressed upon children when the mothers of to-day were little girls.

Personal Notes

These things were neglected and comparatively recently became a part of child life. Only a few years ago fresh air in a schoolroom was almost unknown when the weather suggested the closing of windows. At the same time little attention was given to systematicizing the children's exercise.

Those days have passed and they will never return. Through training in the schoolroom it has become natural to the child to demand well ventilated room. Once accustomed to plenty of fresh air, the lack of ventilation is unbearable. In the schools the children are learning that systematic exercise is the most beneficial.

Physicians who are watching the health and physical condition of the children in well regulated schools impress upon the boys and girls the necessity of immediate attention to physical defects—the eyes, teeth, etc.

Remember: If exercise and pure air become a habit to your children, they will also add to your health.

Lillian Russell's Answers.
C. B.: If you wish to scent the cleansing cream and skin food add a few drops of oil of rose or any favorite perfume. The oils are the best to use, for they are stronger and will give a more lasting odor.

Mrs. W.: Peeling the skin from the face is a dangerous operation, and I would not advise you to do this. If you have a poor complexion this will not help it any, for poor complexion is caused by poor circulation of the blood, and taking the outer skin from the face will not remove the condition entirely.

K. L.: I am sorry, but I cannot send you a formula for hair treatment, but I will have to get this from your physician. The proportions of the sulphur and molasses are important, and the blood are one teaspoonful of sulphur to four of molasses. Mix thoroughly and take three times daily for three days, then stop for a day and take again for three days. Continue in this manner for a week or two weeks. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you the greatest treatment for removing blackheads.

E. L. J.: Superfluous hair is disfiguring and I would by all means advise you to have the growth removed while it is still light. The electric needle is the safest and most effective way of removing superfluous hair. However, as the growth of hair, it may be easily removed by the wax or ammonia treatment. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope, and I shall send directions for removing superfluous hair.

Dr. Brady's Health Talks

The Round-Shouldered Child.

The slouching, weak-cheisted, round-backed schoolgirl who is daily reproved by her parents for not standing erect can't help herself. She isn't careless; she has a normal desire to look well, but the lines forming wrong with her spine. Scolding won't correct her bad posture. She needs physical culture. Perhaps she also needs internal medicine, or even apparatus for her spine.

One of the worst things which could happen to such a child is the application of a shoulder brace. Her muscles and ligaments are too weak to support her shoulders, it would be simply adding to the weakness all taking away from those muscles all their function. When a child is yet too weak to walk, she is too weak to stand. In every case of round shoulders there is a spinal curvature of the upper dorsal spine exaggerated. This is called "kyphosis," meaning hump. The trouble makes its appearance once between the eighth and twelfth years, when the child is bending over a school desk a number of hours each day.

Exercises to Correct the Deformity.
The following exercises are curative if carried out regularly each day, and instituted before the bones have grown in a vicious position:
1. Stand erect. Bend forward and draw up shoulders and elbows as near together as possible, such as in yawning and stretching. Now, bend up gradually with the shoulders and arms still to straighten out the round back.
2. Breathe. Clasp hands behind neck. Bring elbows forward as far as possible, at the same time force the head out of the chest. Then carry the elbows as far back as possible, while taking a very deep breath; when the chest is as full as you can breathe, rise up on your toes, toing in.

At every opportunity at play or in school, clasp the hands behind the neck as in Exercise 1, and take a deep breath. Do this when out walking, put the hands straight in front of you and try to strike them together behind you.

As for desks and chairs, for children or adults, the back should be low, and instead of a hollow opposite the small of the back there should be a forward arching. The hollow-backed chair predisposes to round shoulders.

Questions and Answers.
Mrs. B. J. asks: What causes gall-stones?
Reply: Some previous bacterial infection of the gall-sac, especially typhoid fever in earlier life.

C. H. W. writes: I am fifty-six, have a blood-pressure of 210, the urine contains "scattering hyaline casts, and a faint trace of albumin." The arteries are hardened. Can I be cured?
Reply: You probably have a low-grade nephritis. Careful limitation of grade, and medicinal or electrical or hydrotherapeutic measures to reduce the blood pressure, should give you many years of comfort.

E. T. S. inquires: What is rheumatism of the heart?
Reply: The name is used in a careless or ignorant way for many different conditions, some serious and others not. It is no definite diagnosis. What does the doctor mean? Has the patient valvular disease, heart muscle degeneration; just what is wrong? Sometimes even that serious disease, angina pectoris, masquerades under this name.

DINNER WEEK

BY MARTHA WESTOVER.

This is dinner week because Thanksgiving comes within it, and everybody knows right well that it takes several days to get ready for the big day and several days to recuperate. This is not on account of the dinner alone, but because it is a holiday season, and we are inclined to be a bit intemperate where the good things are concerned. Yes, "intemperate" in eating and drinking, and unfortunately those who are in the first named class are never regulated by law.

We can formulate a few rules for ourselves, however, and help maintain the good health of the community. In the meals here arranged we have them so balanced as to food value that they will not interfere with our comfort.

One dinner is a vegetarian menu throughout. This is a wise thing, because vegetables belong to the class of foods that furnish the greatest amount of mineral salts and water. They contain cellulose, a fibrous, woody substance that gives bulk to food and stimulates the digestive juices and moves the food along the digestive tract. So while a vegetable meal serves to appease our hunger it is not the kind that we say "overloads the stomach."

As a rule, people eat too much, not because they want to push the disservice-building or heat-producing foods, but because they are hungry. So a vegetable meal performed the office without overloading. In a meal where meats or fowl are used some kind of raw salad should be provided, because in cooking in many instances the mineral salts are lost, and the cellulose is best eaten crisp. Fruits come under the same head as vegetables; that is, they are from 75 to 90 per cent water, hence the name "hydrates." So with fruit punch, fruit salads and the like, aid the digestion of the heavy foods.

SOME OF THE RECIPES USED IN THESE MENUS

Dinner Salad.—Remove the skins from Malaga grapes, cut in halves lengthwise and remove seeds. Add an equal measure of English walnut meats, broken in pieces, and one-half the measure of celery cut in thin slices crosswise with slices cut. Moisten with French dressing and arrange in small nests made of crisp lettuce leaves.

Cranberry Tarts.—Cover the outside of small patty pans with puff paste and bake in a moderately quick oven until light. Lift them from the patty pans and you will have a patty shell. Put one quart of cranberries with a pound of sugar in a baking dish and bake until clear. At serving time fill the patty shells with cranberries, dust with powdered sugar and bake long enough to make them hot and glaze the top.

Pumpkin Custard.—Steam enough pumpkin to make one cupful of mashed pumpkin, add to it while hot one teaspoonful of butter, sprinkle over it a tablespoonful of flour, mix. Beat the yolks of three eggs with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, add a saltspoonful of salt and one pint of milk. Stir the pumpkin into egg and sugar, add the brandy or cinnamon, turn into a baking dish and bake until "set." Beat the egg whites with powdered sugar, beat together, heap over the custard, dust with sugar and brown in oven. Serve warm or cold.

The Trey O'Hearts

Romantic Tale by Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright 1914 by Louis Joseph Vance

SYNOPSIS.
By arrangement with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, it is possible to read "The Trey O' Hearts" in the Times-Dispatch. Also to see it in pictures at the Superior Theatre. Synopsis of preceding chapters: The Trey of Hearts is the death sign used by Seneca Trine in the private war of vengeance which thrives in the agency of his daughter Judith, a woman of violent passions like his own. He wages against Alan Law, son of the man (now dead) who was innocently responsible for the accident which left Trine a helpless cripple for life. Alan loves and is loved by Rose, Judith's twin and double, but in all other respects her opposite. Judith vows to compel Alan's death, but Alan saves her life under dramatic circumstances, and so unwittingly causes the death of her sister Rose. Judith becomes alienated from her father through her failure to carry out his homicidal plan, and because of the aid she has extended Alan in his fight with Rose from the vantage point of the mountains through the agency of Western Arizona. Alan, Rose, Barbara and Judith are pursued relentlessly by Trine's agents.

The New Judith.
From sleep as from drugged stupor Judith Trine awakened, struggling back to consciousness like some exhausted diver from the black depths to the star-stricken surface of a night-bound pool.

And for a little she lay unstriving, her half-numb wits fumbling with their business of renewing acquaintance with the world.

At first she could by no means recognize her surroundings. This rude chamber of rough plank walls and primitive furnishings; this wide, hard couch she shared with her still slumbering sister, Rose; the view revealed by a fair perspective of tree-clad mountains through which a wide-bosomed canyon rolled down to an emerald plain, conveyed nothing to her intelligence.

A formless sense of some epochal change in the habits and mental processes of a young lifetime, added to her confusion.

Who was she herself, this strange creature who rested here so calmly by the side of Rose? If she were Judith Trine, how came she to be there? Irreconcilable opposition in every phase of character, the sisters had so studiously avoided association with each other ever since childhood; they had not shared the shelter of four walls overnight since the time beyond the bounds of Judith's memory. What, then, had so changed them both that they should be found in such close company?

What, indeed, had become of the wild thing Judith Trine, the center-day? Surely she had little enough in common with this Judith of to-day, in whose heart was no more room for hate, hatred, malice or any uncharitable feeling, so full was it of love, which, though it was focused upon the person of one man, none the less embraced all the world—even her sister and successful rival in that one man's affections.

This change had not come upon her without warning. She had been almost insensibly aware of its advent through the gradual softening of that old Judith's hard and vengeful nature in the course of the last few days. But now that the revolution was accomplished, she hardly knew herself—she hardly knew the world, indeed, so different did she regard it—not without something of the wide-eyed wonderment of a child to find all things so new and strange and beautiful.

And this was the work of love!

Now the chain of memories was quite complete, no link lacking in its continuity. She recalled clearly every incident that had marked the slow growth of this great love she had for Alan Law, from that first day, not yet a month old, when he had escaped the fiery deathtrap she had set for him and repaid her only by risking his life anew to save her from destruction, down to this very morning when the stream from a hydraulic nozzle had sent in the drink of a three-hundred-dred-foot precipice a primeval automobile containing two desperate men bent upon compassing the death of her beloved.
